The results of Australia's Wine List of the Year Awards are in, and Melbourne newcomers Circl has been crowned Australia's Wine List of the Year. Celebrating its 32nd Anniversary, the awards ceremony was presented at NSW Parliament House in Sydney where more than 300 of the industry's finest gathered on Monday, 29 September.

In addition to the major trophy, Circl – which only opened last year – also picked up another staggering seven category awards across the night including Australia's Best Restaurant Wine List - City, Australia's Best List of Wines by the Glass, Australia's Best Champagne List, Australia's Best Sparkling Wine List, Best Wine List Victoria, and Australia's Best Listing of Victorian Wines. Circl's list also picked up the Sommeliers Choice Award which is voted upon by fellow Australian sommeliers.

Circl's Xavier Vigier also received the prestigious Judy Hirst Award, which is awarded to the sommelier responsible for curating the winning list, an extraordinary result given Xavier won this Major Award just three years ago with his wine list at Ten Minutes by Tractor. Other front runners at this year's ceremony included Sydney's Bennelong who judges applauded for its balanced list which paid homage to staff both past and present to celebrate its 10th anniversary. Brisbane's Agnes Restaurant was also acknowledged once again for its impressive wine list with judges noting its dedication to the discovery of new Australian producers amongst respected stalwarts.

This year's state and territory stand-outs included Bennelong (Best Wine List NSW), Gibney (Best Wine List WA), The Salopian Inn (Best Wine List SA), Fico (Best Wine List TAS), Agnes (Best Wine List QLD), and Capitol Bar & Grill (Best Wine List ACT). Gibney, Capitol Bar & Grill, and The Salopian Inn all took out these State titles for the second consecutive year.

Circl's winning wine list was praised by Senior Judge Andrew Graham for its "eye-watering depth" that establishes a new meaning to "accessible" on wine lists.

"So often, the great wines of the world seem almost mythical. They're things that drinkers dream about, but so rarely get to experience. Yet the astonishing list from Circl resets what is accessible," said Graham.

"Led by a truly sublime offering of wines by the glass, which is gleefully heavy with famous 'unicorns', there is eye-watering depth throughout this list. You can start with the wonderfully well contextualised Champagne offering, take a flight of rare rosé and end up with a dive into magnificent rare old Australian Shiraz. What a journey!"

The win marks the second year in a row that a Victorian venue has won the coveted title, with Gimlet at Cavendish House taking out the top accolade at last year's ceremony. This is just Circl's second time entering Australia's Wine List of the Year Awards after opening in Melbourne's Punch Lane in 2024. The venue classifies itself as a 'wine-led restaurant' offering over 150 wines by the glass to pair with its seasonal, Scandinavian-inspired food menu.

Of this year's results, Chairman of Judges Peter Forrestal commented, "The enthusiasm with which those involved in restaurants and, more generally, in serving the public is infectious. The imaginative quality of the food being brought to Australian restaurant tables and the wines that sommeliers have to offer their customers has never been more satisfying or stimulating. The education of sommeliers is at an all-time high. Documenting all this since 1994 is Australia's Wine List of the Year with another record number of entries to affirm the quality of individual restaurants and to record excellence at the table."

This year, a remarkable six venues were added to the Australia's Wine List of the Year Hall of Fame, which is a collection of the country's leading names in hospitality. To be applicable, venues must have won Australia's Wine List of the Year once or a State/Territory or Australian category award three times while also maintaining their glass rating each year. Among the new inductees for 2025 were Melbourne Supper Club (Best Wine Bar List 2008, 2011, 2012); Hobart's Stillwater (Best Wine List Tasmania 2016, 2017, 2018); and Canberra's The Boat House (Best Listing of ACT Wines 2019, 2020, 2021). Brisbane's Cru Bar + Cellar also had an impressive six inclusions most notably for its title of Australia's Wine List of the Year in 2022, along with three-year accolades for Best Wine Bar List, Best Wine List Queensland, Best Wine by the Glass List, Best Champagne List, and Best Listing of Queensland Wines.

Australia's Wine List of the Year Awards was established in 1993 by Rob Hirst OAM and his late wife, Judy, together with Tucker Seabrook. The awards honour the time, skill, and resources that go into developing the highest-quality wine lists and pay tribute to the talented sommeliers, owners, their teams and the cellars behind them. Just last year, Rob was awarded the Order of Australia Medal for his services to oenology and to industry associations.

2025 continued to showcase the breadth and depth of Australia's wine lists with another year of record entry numbers from across the country. Hirst says of this year's results: "We're grateful to receive such significant support from the industry and our Award partners for yet another year of Australia's Wine List of the Year Awards and the quality of wine lists across the country has never been better. There is a clear interest and intent by sommeliers, venue owners and beverage managers and directors to build harmony and synergy between the menu and drinks list, and this year's results are proof that the skill and dedication to this task is stronger than ever"

"This year, a record number of venues received the coveted 'Three Glass' rating, an increase of 10% on last year. Many of these venues have received this distinction for the first time with freshly opened venues like Sydney's Table Manners, Brisbane's The Fifty Six, and Adelaide's Station Road all leaping straight to the highest rating in their first year. It's an incredible achievement and one that reflects the importance of a wine and drinks list to the overall dining experience.

"Tonight's awards is not only a celebration but a recognition of the outstanding work of the sommeliers, owners, beverage directors, venue managers and entrepreneurs who make Australia's hospitality industry one of the best in the world and we congratulate all of this year's Award Winners and Glass winning venues for their achievements this year," Hirst said.

The judging panel, led by Chair of Judges Peter Forrestal and Deputy Chairs Toni Paterson MW and Jeni Port, is made up of over 35 esteemed industry professionals from Australia and around the world. These professionals include Master Sommeliers, Masters of Wine and other respected industry experts spanning wine writers and commentators, wine show judges, and past winners.

Each list is judged by a pair of judges who assess it independently and confidentially. The lists are evaluated based on content, balance, suitability to the venue, presentation, and pricing. If the list meets the required standard, it is awarded a glass rating. One Glass indicates the list is recommended, Two Glasses signal that the list is excellent, and Three Glasses are awarded only to lists that are deemed outstanding.

Once all lists have been reviewed and scored, the country's top lists are then re-reviewed and ranked by the full Australian and International Panel to select the Australia's Wine List of the Year Award winner.

"It's always a privilege to witness the innovation and depth of knowledge that go into crafting Australia's top wine and beverage lists. This year's winners have shown incredible passion and attention to detail, drawing on strong relationships and world-class expertise to create truly memorable experiences. These awards are a celebration of that excellence and the individuals who continue to elevate the standard for hospitality across the country." Genevra Leek, Editor-in-Chief of Major Awards Partner Qantas Magazine | Travel Insider said.
